More speakers and accommodation details announced

Our website with conference details is now live!

‘Culture, Conduct and Retention: The Next 100 Years of Women in Local Government.’

Welcome to our second announcement for the 2021 ALGWA Vic Conference. We are getting so excited putting together this awesome program and can't wait to keep announcing more information to you.

We are thrilled to announce another two speakers to the lineup who are both inspiring and exciting women in business and Government. More speaker and conference details will be released progressively leading up to the conference.

The conference website is now live, which features more details about speakers, location, accommodation and sponsorships.

SECOND RELEASE:

Natalie Egan. Announced speaker for 2021 ALGWA Vic Conference.

Natalie Egan

Natalie joined the Victorian Auditor-General's Office in 2017 and has managed a variety of local government performance audits covering service delivery and asset management. In 2020, Natalie managed a performance audit on Sexual Harassment in Local Government, which was tabled in Victorian Parliament in December 2020.

Melissa Scadden

Melissa Scadden is a Partner at Justitia, an employment law firm that is excited to sponsor this year's ALGWA Vic conference. In addition to advising employers (including local government) on the full gamut of employment law matters, Melissa has acted as Arbiter on numerous Councillor Code of Conduct disputes and more recently worked with a number of Councils to refresh their Codes of Conduct. She has a keen interest in early intervention strategies for workplace conflict, along with building the capacity of individuals to effectively engage in difficult conversations. Melissa also regularly conducts complex workplace investigations and delivers training, and is frequently asked to speak on employment law matters at industry conferences.
